Bigfoot, also called Sasquatch, is said to be a large, hairy creature that walks on two legs, like a human. Many people believe Bigfoot lives deep in the forests of North America, far from towns and cities. Even though scientists have never found real evidence, stories about Bigfoot continue today.

Bigfoot sightings became popular in the 1950s. At that time, people started to report seeing a tall, ape-like creature in the woods. The idea of Bigfoot spread quickly in newspapers and magazines. In the 1960s and 1970s, Bigfoot became a cultural symbol, and it appears in TV shows and movies. Sightings reached their highest number in the 1970s.

After that, things began to change. In the 1980s and 1990s, fewer people claimed to see Bigfoot. Some thought the creature was just a fiction. Others believed people were making up stories for attention. The number of reported sightings dropped, and this continued into the 2000s and 2010s. Today, in the 2020s, Bigfoot sightings are rare.

Technology may be a reason for this change. Now that everyone carries a camera on their phone, it's easier to check if a photo or video is real. If Bigfoot is still out there, it's strange that we don't have clearer proof by now.

Sightings have not only changed over time—they are also different by location. The region with the most sightings is the Pacific Northwest. It includes states like Washington and Oregon. This area has large forests and mountains, perfect for hiding. Other regions, like the Appalachians and the Rockies, also have reports, but not as many, and the South and the Northeast have the fewest.

Bigfoot may be one of the most famous mysteries in North America. Whether real or just part of folk tale, the idea of a hidden forest creature continues to capture people's imagination. As technology improves and forests grow quieter, it is possible that Bigfoot will remain hidden forever—or finally be discovered. Until then, the mystery lives on.

問1 What is Bigfoot often described as?

- a) A small bear with a white coat.
- b) A mysterious, human-shaped creature covered with hair.
- c) A flying monster that lives in caves.
- d) A large, ape-like animal that lives in towns and cities.

問2 Which decade had the most Bigfoot sightings?

- a) 1950s.
- b) 1970s.
- c) 1990s.
- d) 2020s.

問3 Why might there be fewer sightings today?

- a) People don't go outside anymore.
- b) Bigfoot has moved to the city.
- c) Better cameras make it harder to fake sightings.
- d) It is now illegal to report Bigfoot sightings.

問4 Which region has the second-highest number of sightings?

- a) Midwest.
- b) Appalachia.
- c) South.
- d) Rockies.

問5 Which is the best reason people believe Bigfoot lives in the Pacific Northwest?

- a) It has the most sightings and lots of forest.
- b) It is close to Canada, where many legends come from.
- c) The weather there makes it hard to take pictures.
- d) Bigfoot only appears where many people live.
